

Australasian Evolution Society

Promoting the scientific study of evolution

Welcome to the Australasian Evolution Society web page. We aim to foster interest and intellectual exchange among those interested in all facets of evolution.

The society's main event is its biannual (now annual) meeting, where evolutionary biologists come together to present and discuss the current state of evolutionary research in Australasia. 2015 marked the 9th biennial meeting which was held in Cairns as part of the international conference Behaviour 2015. In 2019, the meeting was held in Sydney and this year we will have a virtual meeting VirtualAES.

Membership in the society allows you to participate in our conferences to engage with other members. Feel free to join the discussion via twitter and the AES Facebook Group to be notified about the latest research, news, jobs, and events.

On our website you can learn about the cutting edge research being conducted by Australasian evolutionary biologists in our blog. You can meet the people behind the research in our scientist profiles section where we get an insight into the minds and imaginations of evolutionary biologists. The links section contains information about institutions across Australasia where evolutionary research is being conducted.

If you have any jobs, events, scholarships etc, that you would like advertised on the site contact us webmaster and we can add it to our news section.
